FROM THE PRESIDENT:

Insights into an extraordinary year

As we come to the end of one academic year and begin another, it behooves us to look with gratitude at the achievements and issues of the past one and to plan enthusiastically for that which faces D'Youville in the one ahead. The 2004-05 academic year has seen many significant developments for D'Youville College. A principal activity was the preparation of the Middle States ten-year report and the visitation of the Middle States team in April. That effort took many months and much deliberation on the college campus because it involved the entire campus community and necessitated both self-reflection and the projection of the most compelling issues that face the college for the proximate future.

The visit by the Middle States team was a great success. We enjoyed learning from our colleagues and benefited greatly from the interaction with them. As a result of that visit, there were three comprehensive recommendations made to the college:

- To continue to dialog about D'Youville's mission statement and to incorporate the mission into all of our plans, programs and departments
- To develop a new institutional plan that flows directly from the mission statement and addresses future needs
- To develop a comprehensive outcomes assessment evaluation program, which will enable us to discover whether or not we are meeting our goals and achieving the standards that we have set for ourselves.

LAYING NEW ACADEMIC MILESTONES

Along with the comprehensive Middle States process, however, the college made many other significant strides as follows:

- The chiropractic program, offered first during the 2004-05 academic year, worked out its curriculum, on both the undergraduate and graduate levels, modifying it and streamlining its offerings. It also commenced its initial recruitment efforts, which successfully brought a significant number of new students to D'Youville in the fall of 2005.
- The mathematics major that has not been offered at D'Youville since 1993 was reinvigorated and took in its first students in August 2005. This new academic program will meet the overwhelming demand for math and computer science teachers and will broaden the college's liberal arts and sciences degree offerings.
- The year 2004-05 also was the first full academic year during which the exercise and sports studies program was offered. It seems to be on a very good course attracting students and preparing them with a solid foundation for future opportunities in their field. The growing interest in exercise science and fitness and D'Youville's long expertise in healthcare and the sciences allows this program to fit easily into the college's curricular offerings.

SHARING OUR INTELLECTUAL WEALTH

One of the most exciting developments of the past year has been the focus on research. Inasmuch as D'Youville now offers so many programs on the graduate level, especially the new doctoral programs, it is important for the faculty and the students to be engaged in research programs. Throughout the past year, many faculty have developed research agendas, have been involved in individual and collaborative projects, and have used the excitement that those projects have produced to enhance their teaching and to involve the students. Because of the importance of research in graduate education, it is incumbent upon D'Youville to offer opportunities and resources to both faculty and students to help them engage their knowledge in ways that will prove beneficial when they are applied to many fields of learning and professional issues.

This past year has seen the beginning of the D'Youville College Center for Cognitive Science that focuses on providing research opportunities for faculty and students in a multitude of interdisciplinary areas including cognition, ontology, learning, behavioral sciences, consciousness studies, biopsychology, spatial reasoning and extended biomedical applications.

That research, coupled with the work being done currently by other faculty members in their individual departments, has ignited many other faculty to discover their issues of investigation and to pursue them.

STRENGTHENING OUR ATHLETIC PROWESS

During 2004-05 the college participated in the newly configured North East Athletic Conference (NEAC) of NCAA Division III teams. D'Youville fared well in the competition and embraced eagerly the issues that face any fledgling athletic conference. Through the hard work of all of the eleven colleges participating in the conference, the academic and athletic standards of the players are high, the colleges enjoy excellent competitive sports, and athletes are grounded in the values commensurate with good sportsmanship and athletic rigor.

D'Youville's crew team continues to strengthen its athletic prowess and participated in several competitions. Because of increased interest among the students, the crew team has expanded and will be even more competitive and competent during the 2005-06 year.

Although, in the past few years, D'Youville has been able to build a beautiful new gym and expand the locker rooms and exercise facilities, the athletic programs are going to require continuous attention, funding and space over the next few years.

BUILDING OUR FINANCIAL BASE

Multifaceted fundraising efforts were successful. The college endowment has grown and has reached $17,910,000. During the past year, the scholarship funds have increased also from approximately $2.8 million to $3.2 million. In addition, the college was successful in acquiring new grant funding. A review of the list of the grants received indicates the extent of their financial support but does not portray adequately the incentive they have provided for research, programmatic development, marketing and recruitment of students.

Recently, D'Youville was notified that the college will receive $1.6 million from the Transportation Equity Act—A Legacy For Users (TEA-LU). Those funds will be used to reconfigure the block of Fargo Avenue between Connecticut Street and Porter Avenue to make it safer for pedestrian use and more aesthetically appealing.

ENHANCING OUR URBAN CAMPUS

One of the college's most exciting accomplishments was the dedication of a new residence building in January 2005. This building houses 165 students and is built in an apartment-style design. The building lends significance to the Westside of Buffalo and enhances Connecticut Street particularly.

Passersby have commented on the appeal of the structure and are pleased that D'Youville has been able to expand in such a way that strengthens the surrounding community.

A major improvement made during the summer of 2005 was the replacement of all the windows in the Koessler Administration Building. It is the first phase of a two-phase process. The next and very welcome change will be the installation of a completely new HVAC system, resulting in air-conditioning of the entire building and Madonna Hall as well.

Another substantial physical improvement made over the summer was the upgrading of the Kavinoky Theatre. The lighting was replaced with a state-of-the-art system. New curtains, paint and an apron, added to the front of the stage, all enhance the theatre's appearance.

CONTINUING THE TRADITION OF SERVICE

Service is a strong component of D'Youville's mission. The number of students engaged in service projects increases each year; the learning and satisfaction that is achieved through those programs is of great value not only to the community, but also to the students themselves.

During the past year, the Students in Free Enterprise (SIFE) had an extraordinary year. They secured first place in the regional competition in New Orleans and moved to the national level. At the national level, one hundred schools—including D'Youville—were divided into ten divisions. While they did not place in the final round, the students took first place in the first round and second place in the second round. The endeavors in which they were engaged were service projects involving high school students who learned to develop and implement an entrepreneurial plan of assisting people in Western New York to fill out their tax returns, especially those who had difficulty because of age, infirmity, language or lack of literacy. The results were then presented in competition.

PLANNING OUR ENROLLMENT GROWTH

The fall semester of 2004 saw the largest enrollment that D'Youville has ever had. However, that number has been exceeded in fall 2005 and D'Youville now has more undergraduate, master's level, and doctoral students than in any previous year. One of the other significant goals for the college for the past several years was to provide a better mix of students so that the number of freshmen was increased, the number of graduate students stabilized, and a greater diversity was found among students in graduate programs. Progress has been made toward each of those goals and D'Youville is planning new and significant enrollment goals for future years. Although there are many students at D'Youville, the college still remains very personal and true to its mission of addressing individual student needs and of providing the kind of support and encouragement that helps a student achieve academic success.

Not only have the number of students increased but students have changed in other ways as well. SAT scores continue to climb and the diversity of international students grows significantly each semester.

D'Youville's growth has been exponential rather than incremental. It is visible on campus because of the number of new buildings and newly refurbished existing buildings. It is visible, also, by the number of students who traverse the campus on a regular basis and is definitely visible in the number of cars that are parking or trying to park on or near campus at any single moment. There is life and activity everywhere and a wholesome vibrancy is so abundant that it is almost tangible.

Truly, D'Youville College is an exhilarating place to be!

Now it is time to look toward the future...

EMBRACING THE WORLD COMMUNITY

The college is bursting with ideas for new—and exciting—academic programs.

In addition, the college is continuing to expand its technological capability. In future years, D'Youville must make certain that it expands its technology in ways that enable learning and interaction with people in other educational and research institutions throughout the world. The connections with scholars and researchers in other countries will enrich the knowledge base of students here and acquaint them with international developments and possibilities. Marguerite d'Youville's spirit of inclusion is evident in these new ventures.

This same spirit—the spirit of Marguerite—compels D'Youville to move forward in innovative and courageous ways. The new doctoral programs in health policy and chiropractic care are based on the long tradition of providing compassionate health care to those most at risk or most neglected by contemporary practice and systems. Based on Marguerite's innovative ways of serving the most abandoned and neglected, I believe that D'Youville should embrace the opportunity to welcome students from countries where higher education is not so available or accessible as it is in the United States and to find creative ways of educating those who have impediments to learning because of previous experiences or emotional barriers.

Because of the shrinking borders in our world, the international aspect of education must inform both the curriculum and the college's recruitment efforts. D'Youville has made strides in its global presence and its ability to attract students from other countries. However, these steps are only initial ones and must be taken to far greater lengths in order for D'Youville to prepare graduates well for the world in which they will be living. Therefore, international presence through additional study abroad programs, the recruitment of students, and the incorporation of global interests and information in all of the curricular offerings is a challenge that must be addressed in the next years and beyond.

In order to accommodate the increased number of students at D'Youville, there must be a continued search for appropriate property for expansion purposes. In the near future, more space will be required for academic programs, athletic fields, research and parking. The science laboratories should be modernized and expanded and new ones need to be constructed for the program requirements now in place at the college. Classrooms are being updated but more are required to meet the enrollment growth anticipated in the next few years. Along with classroom space is the concomitant need for faculty offices. Plans are being made for these additional facilities as well.

Additionally, for the last several years, D'Youville has requested permission from the Ministry of Education in Ontario, Canada, to offer courses and a degree program on-site in Canada. This request is moving forward and it is conceivable that within the next two years D'Youville will have a Canadian presence. This development may or may not occur, but D'Youville is poised and ready for the exciting collaborative venture that this proposes. The outcome is contingent upon the permission of the appropriate regulatory agencies in Ontario.

APPROACHING ONE HUNDRED YEARS

Plans are moving forward for the celebration of D'Youville's Centennial in the year 2008. It is startling to think that D'Youville is nearly one hundred years old and has continued to offer a first-class education at a modest tuition to diverse groups of students during these one hundred years. The celebration will be fun, inclusive and filled with gratitude for God's continuous blessings.

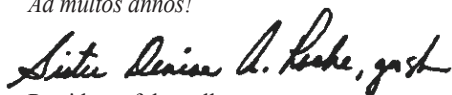

MIRRORING SAINT MARGUERITE

Most of all, thrusting us forward into a wonderful future is the spirit of Marguerite d'Youville. Marguerite was a woman who embraced challenge and turned it into opportunity, always mindful of those who were most marginalized in society.

With that spirit in mind, D'Youville prepares to move forward with the same ingenuity, creativity, determination, and compassion that were so obvious in Marguerite's life.

It is apparent that our graduates have accomplished remarkable things and have given overwhelming examples of service and compassion emanating from the education that they have received here. It is my hope that current students and future graduates continue in that same vein and become the fine women and men of the future who will transform the face of society and consider it a privilege to offer their hands to the needy.

Ad multos annos!

FUNDRAISING June 1, 2004 - May 31, 2005

A reflection of support of the college's mission

“To teach students to contribute to the world community by leading compassionate, productive and responsible lives,” are lines from the D’Youville College mission statement that articulate the primary goal of the college. This is a daunting responsibility and one that is not easily accomplished. Whether students are studying physical therapy, nursing, education, or international business, the objective is always the same: they must be cognizant that they who have had the privilege of a baccalaureate degree—and for many who have studied beyond that level—have a responsibility to the communities in which they elect to live and work. Thus, the philosophy of St. Marguerite d’Youville becomes a living commitment throughout their years at the college.

D’Youville is extremely fortunate to have the leadership of Sister Denise A. Roche, GNSH, and an administrative staff who endorse and foster the charge described above. Since 1908 when it was founded, the college has been quick to identify a need in the community and to respond. At the height of World War II, the dearth of nurses resulted in the establishment of a nursing program, which continues to flourish today. It would be easy to give a long litany of the programs that D’Youville has developed because the college saw a deficiency and responded to the need.

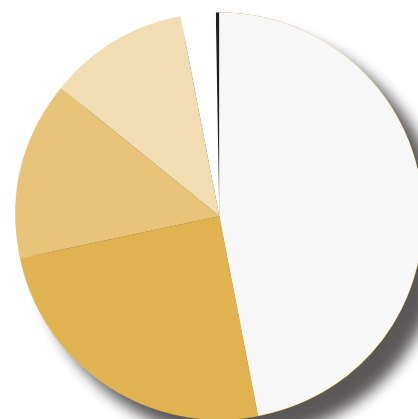

How has D'Youville been able to sustain this expansion and development? It is because the generosity of her alumni and friends has been extraordinary. In the difficult days of the Great Depression, young graduates bought life insurance policies with the college as sole beneficiary. A few years later with the advent of an alumni/development office, a plan was introduced asking graduates to give $36.50 per year or ten cents a day. In the same spirit, the Grey Nuns themselves have long been outstanding examples of beneficence, returning their small stipends to the college coffers. And so, the college continues to carry on its mission.

This past year has been a particularly gratifying one in the annals of the college's fundraising. Significant success was experienced in procuring grants throughout the 2004-2005 year. Almost $1.2 million in gifts and grants from alumni, friends, corporations and foundations flowed into the college. The John R. Oishei Foundation awarded a three-year, $450,000 grant to the Touch Lives – Be a Nurse program. The year ended with a two-year, $350,000 grant from the Margaret L. Wendt Foundation directed to the chiropractic program. In addition to these two significant awards, the college also received thirty other grants (ten new and twenty renewals) throughout the year.

D'Youville's endowment may never reach the size of larger colleges and universities, but we know that alumni will carry on the legacy of giving and bequeathing to D'Youville. Her smaller endowment does not imply that the college does less in providing excellent education for students. The quality and effectiveness of classroom teaching, the welcoming of low-income students, and the retention and graduation of minority students all reflect the concerns of the faculty for our students and the careful stewardship of funds entrusted to the college. Jesuit Saturdays by William J. Byron, SJ, former president of The Catholic University of America and rector of Georgetown University, identifies these values: "...to carefully and creatively manage limited resources, working for a multiplier effect through a strong sense of commitment to students, and preparing first generation college students for upward mobility and careers of complete and generous service to their communities." These words eloquently articulate D'Youville's mission.

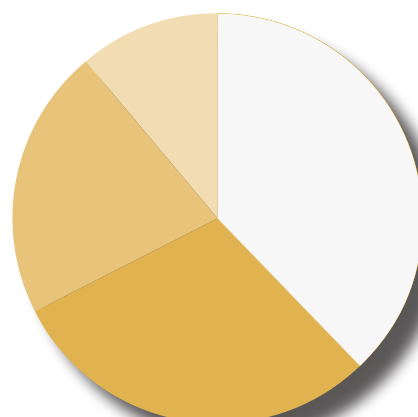

Whatever the heights to which the college has ascended in the nearly one hundred years of her history, there must be no limits as to where she can go and to what she can continue to achieve. D'Youville will always be a good steward of the funds entrusted to her and of the students entrusted to her, who expect to receive the excellent education for which she is known.

It is a tribute to those whose names are recorded here in recognition of their loyalty and constancy to present and future D'Youvillians and to their Alma Mater. Without their commitment and generosity, the many good things happening here would never be realized. Never has it been a more exciting time to be at D'Youville, nor a more exciting time to ponder what the future will bring.

Alice Barton, poet and longtime professor at the University of Massachusetts, has authored her first novel. South Station recreates her birthplace, Lowell, Mass., during World War II and the 1940s. She features a city of neighborhoods centered around the ethnic Catholic churches that permeated religious, social and cultural life.
