Hon. Byron Brown

PRESIDENT'S, HOLDAY PARTY & CENTENNIAL OPENING CEREMONY

he College Center was alive with a throng of celebrants comprising employees of the College, members of the board of trustees and friends, and with many past members of the staff and administration on hand as well.

D'Youville and its president Sister Denise A. Roche received numerous accolades during the afternoon's program. The Honorable Kevin Dillon, chairman of the board of trustees, opened the festivities and he especially praised Sister Denise, mentioning that he had enjoyed working with her. Sister Mary Charlotte Barton, GNSH, who served as the thirteenth president of the institution preceding Sister Denise, commented on the remarkable progress both in programming and physical plant that have occurred. She said that with God's help, she prays that D'Youville will continue to flourish throughout this century.

Sister Denise welcomed guests, obviously savoring the excitement and exuberant good humor of the almost 500 guests who filled the Blue Lounge. In her remarks, Sister revealed her personal warm feelings for all of the guests.

Among those who presented citations and proclamations was the Honorable Stephen Brereton, Consul General of Canada and D'Youville trustee. He presented to Sister Denise, on behalf of the Canadian people, a piece of Inuit-style sculpture representing the enduring relationship that has existed between the two nations. He also remarked on the great service the College is providing to Canadian students.

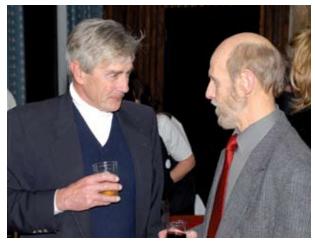

The Honorable Byron Brown, mayor of the city of Buffalo, read a citation praising D'Youville and Sister Denise for the countless contributions made to Buffalo and to Western New York. He proclaimed December 12, 2007, as D'Youville College Day.

Other dignitaries who could not be present but who sent representatives were Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton, Senator Charles Schumer, Governor Eliot Spitzer, Congressman Brian Higgins and Representative Sam Hoyt, NYS.

The convivial mood was enhanced by a splendid buffet and by the music of Mark Mazur and his orchestra.

ECUVENCAL SERVICE OF THANKSGIVING

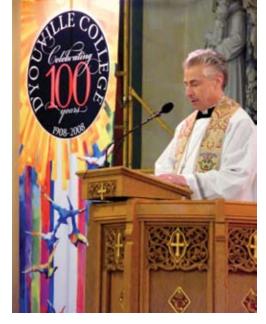

The 2008 calendar year was ushered in with a college-wide Centennial Ecumenical Service of Thanksgiving held on January 30, 2008, at Holy Angels Church adjacent to the D'Youville Campus.

The interfaith service was a colorful tapestry of stories, readings, Scriptures, music and song woven from the various religious and cultural traditions represented by members of the College community. Administrators, faculty, staff, students and alums served as readers and cantors for the service. They offered readings from the Hebraic tradition, multilingual readings in the Islamic tradition, a moving passage from a 1968 sermon of the Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr., an Algonquin creation story and several beloved Christian texts.

Rev. Thomas Ribits, OSFS

A special keepsake program embodying the personal artwork of Rev. Thomas Ribits, OSFS, director of Campus Ministry, was given to each member of the congregation.

glory of music was provided by the young voices of the Holy Angels Academy Chorus and the D'Youville College Chorus as well as the sounds of the Holy Angels Academy Ensemble. Powerful processionals were provided by the Mark Mazur Brass Ensemble and the bagpipe and drum Gordon Highlanders.

The altar party was comprised of Sister Denise A. Roche, GNSH, president of D'Youville College, Sister Mary Charlotte Barton, GNSH, thirteenth president of the College, Sister Marlene G. Butler, GNSH, president of the Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart, Reverend Terrence O'Connell, OMI, pastor of Holy Angels Church, Reverend Janice Mahle, associate campus minister and Rev. Thomas Ribits.

To complete the event, a reception was held in the College Center in the warm spirit of a D'Youvillian family birthday.

D'Youville Honors The BISON Scholarship Fund

On the evening of October 24th a festive event took place in the Blue Lounge of the College Center as D'Youville honored The BISON Scholarship Fund at its 23rd Annual Justice Michael F. Dillon Presidential Scholarship Reception. This fund enables economically disadvantaged children to attend private schools of their choice. As many as 1,200 students each year attend 63 private or parochial elementary schools in the greater Buffalo area, made possible by the fund.

The BISON Fund was established over 13 years ago by the philanthropic trio of Paul D. Bauer, Thomas R. Beecher, Jr. and Christopher L. Jacobs. The name BISON is an acronym for Buffalo Inner City Scholarship Opportunity Network.

Paul Bauer is a former executive vice-president and chief financial officer for Tops Markets. He has been involved in myriad charitable organizations over a span of more than 25 years. He has served on the D'Youville board of trustees and chaired the board for two different terms. He also has served as chair of Catholic Charities and on the boards of Canisius High School, Christ the King Seminary, Kenmore Mercy Hospital, Catholic Charities, Studio Arena and the YMCA of Greater Buffalo, as well. He was honored by D'Youville with an honorary doctoral degree in 1993.

Thomas Beecher, Jr., counsel at Phillips, Lytle LLP, is CEO of Barrantys LLC and chairman of the board of the Buffalo Niagara Medical Campus. He is a member of the dean's advisory council of the School of Law of the University at Buffalo, a director of Albany International Corporation and former chair of Buffalo General Hospital, Kaleida Health and Rand Capital Corporation. He was honored by the Catholic Lawyers Guild with the Thomas More Award. St. Bonaventure University awarded him the Gaudete Medal, and Canisius College named him its distinguished citizen of the year.

Christopher Jacobs is president of Avalon Development in Buffalo. His efforts are directed to the revitalization of Buffalo and Erie County. He helped in founding the South Buffalo Charter School. He serves on regional boards including the Catholic Academy, Buffalo Place, Leadership Buffalo and the Hauptman-Woodward Institute. He is a past member of the Canisius College board of regents, Aids Community Services and Renaissance Foundation.

The event raised more than $95,000, escalating the Presidential Scholarship Fund to over $800,000. The reception was chaired by Mary E. Kirwan '60 and Dr. Joseph A. Grande, professor emeritus. Joanna Pasceri, news coanchor at Channel 7, WKBW, was master of ceremonies.

Students representing recipients of the Presidential Scholarship were guest honorees at the reception. Among those scholars were John Kofmehl, from Pittsburgh, Pa. He received his undergraduate degree in May 2007 in physical therapy. He is currently enrolled in the physical therapy doctoral program. He has served the D'Youville community extensively as a volunteer with Campus Ministry for Habitat for Humanity and Friends of Night People.

Peggy Foster hails from Augusta, Kan. She is a junior physical therapy student. She was drawn to that program when she saw how much help it provided her father in his illness and the independence it allowed him.

Laura Segool is a sophomore in dietetics. She attended Orchard Park High School. This young lady's interest in nutrition began in grade school where she enjoyed learning about healthy food choices. She participates in the Adopt-a-Grandparent Program at Mary Agnes Manor. She will be studying in Greece in the spring semester in D'Youville's new study abroad program in Crete.

Andrew Belden from Pittsburgh, Pa., graduated in May in health services. He is now enrolled in the doctoral program in physical therapy. He is keenly interested in improving the lives of others. Always actively involved, during undergraduate study he participated in Friends of Night People, Buffalo Lives, Brush Up Buffalo and Camp Amerikids. He plans to work in pediatrics with a focus in exercise and play therapy for children with autism.

Amber Linza from Caneadea, N.Y., will receive her undergraduate degree in May 2008. In her years of playing sports, she has received numerous injuries that required physical therapy to ensure proper healing. This motivated her to opt for a physical therapy degree. She has enjoyed an active student life. She has tutored, coached soccer, served as Girl Scout leader and continues to help with the Christmas pageant at her church. She plans to work in a school setting with children afflicted with autism spectra disorder.

The Michael F. Dillon Presidential Scholarship Reception will now be known as The Michael F. and Eleaine T. Dillon Presidential Scholarship Reception, in honor of the mother of Hon. Kevin Dillon, who has chaired the DYC board of trustees for two terms.

DYC Offers New Flexible Format MBA

D'Youville College now offers a Master of Business Administration (MBA) degree program that provides a flexible format through a combination of weekend all-day classes and weeknight online discussion sessions.

The program started this past fall, according to Dr. Kushnood Haq, vice president for academic affairs.

"Our MBA program eliminates the time constraints and scheduling difficulties that most working professionals must deal with when pursuing their MBA degree," Haq stated.

"Concentrations in marketing and human resources management are offered in the program. Classes are held on Saturdays, with online discussion sessions on Wednesday evenings that allow students from professional and business careers to manage their time more effectively and efficiently," he said. "After studying market needs, we developed this program featuring an accelerated format that allows students to complete a three-credit course in as little as five weeks. We believe this will be popular with individuals with pressing schedules."

Two Distinguished Doctors Join Chiropractic Faculty

Dr. Paul T. Hageman, chair of the department of integrative holistic health studies, announces the appointment of two new faculty members who will assume leadership positions within the department's doctor of chiropractic program.

Dr. Peter Diakow has been appointed clinical associate professor and director of the doctor of chiropractic program. Academically qualified, he holds a bachelor's in biology and chemistry from Brock University, Ontario, a doctor of chiropractic from Canadian Memorial College (CMCC), a master's in health services administration from DYC and is currently a candidate for the doctor of education degree in health education and health policy from D'Youville. He holds the distinct honor of being a recognized fellow of the Canadian College of Chiropractic Sciences.

A recognized leader in the chiropractic profession, he has served on the board of the Ontario Chiropractic Association and has published extensively in chiropractic literature. Dr. Diakow is a sought-after speaker and has lectured on chiropractic and health-related topics across both Canada and the United States.

A longtime advocate for integrative healthcare, he has practiced in a variety of interdisciplinary clinical and health education settings. Most recently, he was the director of graduate studies at CMCC where he was responsible for postdoctoral graduate programs that prepare individuals for obtaining fellowship status in three different chiropractic specialty colleges in Canada.

Dr. Diakow, a Canadian citizen and longtime resident of St. Catherines, Ont., where he also has maintained an active private practice, is an involved member of the local Ukrainian Catholic community. In accepting the appointment he stated, "I am excited to have the opportunity to head up what is considered to be one of the most unique and progressive chiropractic education programs in the country. I also strongly support D'Youville's Mission and core values, which are an expression of the life-example of Canadian-born St. Marguerite d'Youville."

Dr. John Taylor, one of the chiropractic profession's most accomplished radiologists, also will be joining the faculty. Dr. Taylor is a graduate of Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College. In addition to completing a postgraduate residency in diagnostic imaging at the Los Angeles College of Chiropractic, he completed a research fellowship in musculoskeletal radiology with the department of radiology at the University of California, San Diego, and at the San Diego Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Taylor holds the distinction of being a diplomate of the American Chiropractic Board of Radiology

(D.A.C.B.R.) and a fellow of the Chiropractic College of Radiology (Canada) [F.C.C.R.(C)]. He is a recognized and respected expert in his field and is the recipient of numerous honors and awards. A prolific writer, Dr. Taylor has published dozens of articles in scientific journals, has written chapters in four radiological texts and is the co-author of one of the most frequently used medical radiological textbooks, Skeletal Imaging: Atlas of the Spine and Extremities, published by W.B. Saunders Co.

He has extensive teaching and clinical experience. Prior to coming to D'Youville, he was a faculty member with the Institute of Evidence Based Chiropractic and director of the master of science in diagnostic imaging postdoctoral residency program at New York Chiropractic College.

Dr. Taylor joins the faculty as professor of chiropractic radiology and director of chiropractic radiological services. He will be teaching diagnostic imaging courses and will be assisting in the development of the interdisciplinary master of science program in diagnostic imaging.

His office will be located at the D'Youville College Chiropractic Health Center, located at 2900 Main Street, Buffalo.

McKeever Rejoins Department of Institutional Advancement

William P. McKeever has been named director of foundation relations at D'Youville College and will focus on obtaining grants from area and national foundations. Previously he was vice president for the Independent College Fund of New York (ICFNY) and executive director of the Buffalo Audubon Society and was responsible for fundraising at both institutions. He also served as director of corporate and foundation relations at D'Youville from 1986-1992.

A resident of Hamburg, he is a graduate of St. Bonaventure University and Medaille College.

McKeever is treasurer of the Lake Erie Seaway Trail Center and a member of the Hamburg Conservation Advisory Board.

Merrily A. Kuhn, RN, Ph.D., ND

Merrily A. Kuhn, '67, RN, Ph.D., ND, associate professor of nursing, has recently published two books, maintains a private practice in health and wellness counseling and is a frequent presenter at national healthcare conferences.

Her book, Lab Reference Pocket Guide with Drug Effects, published by Jones and Bartlett Publishers in May 2007, is a comprehensive pocket-sized guide detailing the highs, norms and lows of several hundred laboratory tests, along with the drugs and diseases that can affect the outcomes. Healthcare professionals will value the lab reference guide for it's ease of use and for developing appropriate care for their patients. Included in this evidence-based guide is an alphabetized list of drugs that allows the healthcare provider to determine easily which lab tests to review.

Merrily's second book, Herbal Therapy & Supplements: A Scientific & Traditional Approach is a unique clinical reference that provides accessible and clinically relevant monographs of herbs, spices and aromatherapy oils for use by healthcare providers. The monographs, similar to those presented in nurses' drug handbooks, contain information on the health risks of taking these substances in combination with over-thecounter and prescription drugs, a behavior that is increasing among the general public. Assessment guidelines help providers monitor side effects, toxicity and drug-herb/drugspice interaction. Specifics of monographs include action, current use, pharmacokinetics, toxicity, contraindications, side effects, longterm safety, use in pregnancy/lactation and use for children. Appendices provide drugherb interaction tables, contraindicated herbs, a listing of Do Not Take Together herbs and a listing by use/indication. Each monograph includes line drawings of the herb as well as extensive reference and research listings.

Todd Walter, Ph.D.

Todd Walter, Ph.D., assistant professor of psychology, successfully published an article in the spring 2007 issue of Eye on Psi Chi entitled "The Undergraduate Psychology Internship: Benefits, Selection and Making the Most of Your Experience." The article is tailored to undergraduate majors in psychology and their mentors and advocates for assisting students in pursuing internship experiences at an optimal level.

Dr. Walter also co-authored an article published in the June 2007 edition of the Journal of the National Medical Association entitled "Assessments for Measuring Patient-Centered Cultural Sensitivity in Community-Based Primary Care Clinics." The article focused on the empirical development of instruments for measuring the perceived cultural sensitivity of African American, Hispanic American and Caucasian American patients in the healthcare that they receive and its implications for enhancing the quality of healthcare delivery.

Dr. Walter successfully passed the national examination for professional practice in psychology in May 2007 and acquired licensure as a psychologist in New York state in June 2007.

Susan J. Kowalewski, Ph.D.

Susan J. Kowalewski has been named chair of the department of business at D'Youville College. She will be responsible for all business programs including the new MBA program.

She was an assistant professor in the department prior to her appointment and is also a member of the graduate council.

Prior to joining D'Youville, she was an adjunct faculty member at Niagara University in the commerce department and MBA program. Kowalewski was also an instructor in the University at Buffalo School of Dental Medicine.

A graduate of the University at Buffalo, she earned her MBA at Rivier College in Nashua, N.H., and her doctorate at UB.

Dr. Donald F. Sabo, director of DYC's Center for Research on Physical Activity, Sports and Health, also serves as research director for the Women's Sports Foundation (WSF). This national nonprofit organization, founded by Billie Jean King, works to increase girls' and women's participation in sports and physical activity. In October 2007, he celebrated with figure skating champion Michelle Kwan at the WSF's annual awards banquet at New York's Waldorf Astoria.

Premiere Graduate Convocation Ceremony for First

n December 8, 2007, the Physician Assistant Department hosted a convocation ceremony to honor the department's first graduating class of BS/MS students. The class was comprised of 19 men and women, 17 of whom graduated with honors.

The keynote address was given by the department's medical director, Dr. Ronald Santasiero, who has been with the PA department since its inception in 1992. Dr. Santasiero spoke of the history of the department, the strength of its leadership and the dedication and character of the graduating class. He also relayed to the graduates information on the changing face of healthcare and what this is likely to mean for them going forward as physician assistant professionals.

A highlight of the ceremony was the recognition of Maureen Finney, MS, RPA-C, department chair, for being the department's first faculty member of the program to be received into the Physician Assistant Education Association's (PAEA) Pi Alpha Honor Society. The criteria for membership requires that one must be nominated and fulfill the requirements set forth by PAEA: experience with a physician assistant program, distinguished scholarship, and leadership or service to a physician assistant program or the profession. Maureen, in turn, received Gretchen Apps into Pi Alpha membership with the bestowal of the coveted Pi Alpha Honor Society Pin, the first graduate in the class to receive the honor. The student criteria are stringent: scholastic achievement, minimum professional grade point average of 3.5, and demonstrated excellence in research, publishing, community professional service or leadership activities. Gretchen graduated summa cum laude, fulfilled all the criteria and, in addition, spent two months completing her elective clinical rotation requirements in Cameroon, Africa, working in a primary care setting.

MARY ANNE STAUDT DUMAS, BSN '70

Described as an innovator, educator, clinician, researcher, author and professor at Stony Brook University, Dr. Mary Ann Staudt Dumas '70 recently received the prestigious 2007 Elizabeth Russell Belford Excellence in Education Award (a founder's award) from Sigma Theta Tau, the national honor society of nursing.

The award was presented at the Sigma Theta Tau International on November 7, in Baltimore, Md. She was thrilled that she was seated at the award presentation with a classmate from D'Youville, Donna Fisselbrand Owens. She wrote, "Clinical practice as a nurse practitioner and teaching and mentoring nurse practitioners have been professional passions. They have given me opportunities to make a difference in the lives of others... all of which began with an outstanding nursing education at D'Youville College." This honor is considered to be the Nobel Prize of nursing.

Mary Anne has had an exciting and exacting career and one that continues today. After graduating in 1970, she spent the next five years in the United States Navy Nurse Corps. She said, "Caring for young Marines and Navy personnel during the Viet Nam War was incredibly rewarding."

On her return to civilian life, she earned her master of science in the first family nurse practitioner class at Stony Brook University, Stony Brook, N.Y. Her Ph.D. was earned at Adelphi University, Garden City, N.Y., in 1990. Now a professor at Stony Brook, she teaches family nurse practitioners and adult nurse practitioners. She is also at the Northport Veterans Administration where she manages a panel of veterans who have complex multisystem problems.

In addition to the international award Dr. Dumas received in November, she has been honored with the SUNY Chancellor's and the Stony Brook University President's Excellence in Teaching Award. She is a 2005 fellow of the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners, and, in 2001, the American College of Nurse Practitioners awarded her the Nancy Sharp Cutting Edge Award for advancing that profession. Additionally she is one of three nurse practitioners selected to be in the Department of Health and Human Services Primary Care Health Policy fellowship.

Mary Anne has published widely and given presentations in an impressive array of healthcare areas of interest: metabolic syndrome, primary care issues, family nurse practitioner research, problem-based learning and preceptor issues.

The mother of three adult children, Robert, Jean and Anne, Mary Anne lives with her husband Patrick in Huntington, Long Island. In her spare moments she manages to sate her love of reading. She also enjoys hiking, scuba diving and international travel. She collects nursing memorabilia, with a special passion for Florence Nightingale letters and signed photographs.

VINCENT AZZARELLI '78

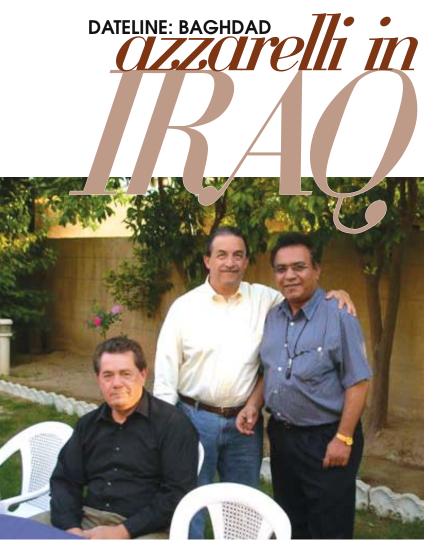

When Vincent Azzarelli walked across the stage in 1978 to receive his degree in history from D'Youville, he was already a member of the military. He joined the Air Force when he graduated from Holy Angels Prep, a high school for boys under the auspices of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate. The Air Force selected him for the "Back to School" program. He opted to attend D'Youville. But it is unlikely that even he dreamed of the career that he would have.

In a recent interview, Vincent savored his study at D'Youville and mentioned his tutelage under Drs. Sean Murray, John Abbarno, Joseph Grande, David Kelly and Sister St. Raphael Carney, GNSH. He described their influence, saying, "They all helped refine my abilities to think, question and analyze any given situation." He went on, "I believe that so many of the fundamental skills I use in my work, past and present, were developed at D'Youville." He remembered especially one class with Dr. Abbarno. During that class, there was a discussion based on the difference between work and play. After graduation, as an Air Force pilot, he remembered and wondered how flying around the world, which was such fun, could be considered work.

"During my first year in the Air Force I realized that I could be an officer and a leader. I knew I could make a difference." This attitude, this thinking, propelled him to the rank of Lt. Colonel and now Chief of Staff of the Iraqi Transitions Assistance Office (ITAO), which is responsible for helping rebuild Iraq.

In the course of his career in the Air Force he has had an assortment of assignments and responsibilities, many in the Middle East. Some were particularly memorable. He mentioned the time spent in Saudi Arabia during Desert Storm/Desert Shield as one of those. His first command at the Northeast Air Defense Sector/Over-the-Horizon Backscatter Radar, Bangor, Maine, was another. The third assignment was in 1999-2001 when he was attached to the Royal Saudi Air Force E3/AWACS weapons systems and commander of the United States training team in Saudi.

After 27 years in the Air Force, in 2007 he retired to the quiet life of a country gentleman in Horseheads, N.Y. In a short time, he became the village manager; then, in 2006, he was tapped for the position of executive director of the National Warplane Museum. But then the State Department intervened with yet another job to be done, this time in Iraq.

On a visit to his family in October 2007, he graciously spent time at D'Youville speaking to Dr. Kelly's European history class, talking to students in the DaVinci School and addressing a gathering of faculty, staff and students. During the course of his talk and the ensuing discussion, many questions were posed regarding the Iraqi situation. Among them was the following: Why is the United States using so many contractors to do jobs previously done by military? He responded that the Army does not have the manpower to fill all the jobs. "To maintain the number of troops to do the jobs contractors do would require an army bigger by 150,000-200,000 personnel. Studies have shown that it takes 7-10 men to support each combat troop."

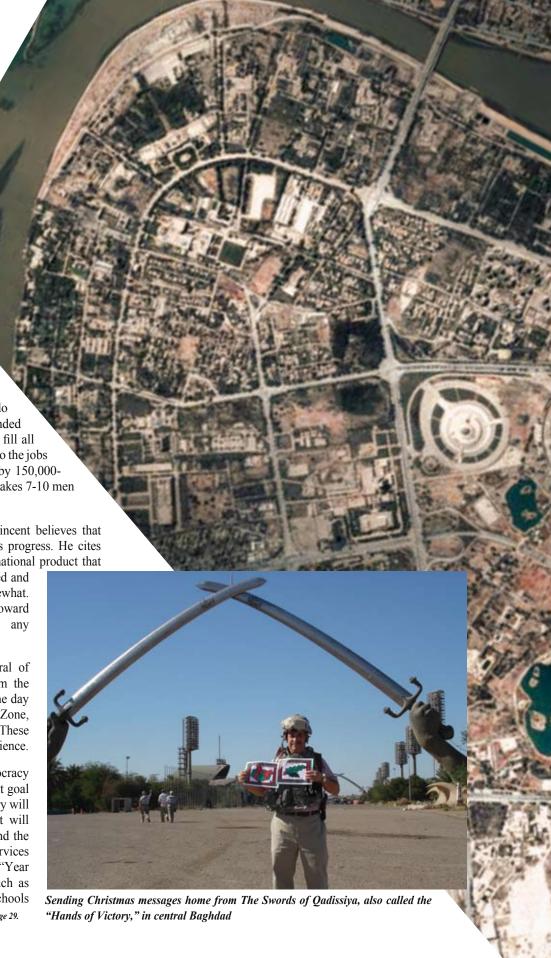

In spite of all the violence we read about, Vincent believes that many improvements have been made. There is progress. He cites the elections that have taken place, the gross national product that has increased, projects that have been completed and violence that has diminished, albeit only somewhat. It appears that there will be greater efforts toward religious/political reconciliation without any instigation on the part of the ITAO.

Yet, in spite of this apparent downward spiral of violence, security is tight. Travel to and from the airport is restricted. Convoys are the order of the day for travel to and from ministries. In the IZ/Green Zone, assigned cars cannot be parked without a guard. These are just a few of the restrictions personnel experience.

He wrote, "The Iraqis will move toward democracy but it will take time for them to accomplish that goal completely." He believes that though the military will begin to "ramp down," the State Department will be there indefinitely. Both the United States and the Iraqi governments are focusing on providing services to the people. Jointly, they have declared a "Year of Service," focusing on essential services such as water, sewer, electricity, fuel, oil, gasoline, schools and hospitals.

Center for Ontology & Interdisciplinary Studies Eric Little, Ph.D., Director Asst. Prof., Doctoral Programs in HE/HP

Today's world revolves around the collection, storage and use of various forms of electronic data. Everywhere in academia and industry, databases and other computational tools are critical for providing capabilities to manage large volumes of data. However, many systems are currently incompatible with one another, since they are often designed by individuals or organizations to provide ad hoc (i.e., problem-specific) solutions for particular domains of interest. Because of this approach, many organizations experience problems integrating and managing their electronic information. Thus, a major research challenge exists for providing abilities to generate, maintain, share and integrate disparate kinds of information from various fields (e.g., bio-medicine, informatics, genomics, national defense, etc.).

Ontologies provide a useful means of combating the problems described above by constructing and utilizing abstract models of a given portion of reality. Ontologies provide elaborate categorical systems that can be used to define objects, object attributes/properties, spaces, times and, most importantly, the relationships between these items (see Fig 1). Ontologies, therefore, provide a means not only for understanding what items are, but also how they stand in relation to one another. Ontologies are designed to provide a set of formal, metaphysical principles, meaning principles that employ sound philosophical and logical reasoning about the basic structure of reality, that can be captured in a semantic framework and utilized by computational systems. By capturing the semantic meaning of electronic data, computers are capable of better understanding the data they contain and, in turn, of providing human users with more efficient and effective means of storing, searching for and utilizing disparate forms of computerized data (see Fig. 2, pg.30).

Providing capabilities for improved data integration in healthcare and other areas is a major focus of the DYC Center for Ontology & Interdisciplinary Studies. The design of ontologies requires an interdisciplinary approach, since it couples the field of traditional philosophy (metaphysics, epistemology and logic) with information sciences to create new tools that can capture the semantic structure of electronic information. Similarly, the doctoral programs in health education/ health policy draw a wide range of students who study a plethora of disparate research areas (e.g., healthcare education, dietetics, nursing, mental health and healthcare policy formation). The interdisciplinary nature of the center ties in well with the broad range of doctoral studies under way at DYC, in that it provides a means for many of our doctoral students to understand how their research extends to other related areas of interest.

Students are challenged to think about the organizational and semantic elements of their research, to see how their individual research agendas inform and impact on other areas of ongoing research. Given the breadth of our doctoral student body, it is imperative to have research centers such as this one at the College. It provides students with cutting-edge approaches to implementing their research in the continually changing healthcare industry, where electronic data are an ever-increasing issue [e.g., as is the case with growing prevalence of electronic health records (EHRs) and similar technologies].

APRIL 5, 2009 Formal Alumni Tea

APRIL MAY 2009 Closing Event (to be arranged)

The College has commissioned a life size bronze statue of St. Marguerite d'Youville for display in front of the Koessler Administration Building. Local artist David Derner has been selected to create the statue, which reflects St. Marguerite's compassion and grace. Join College officials and Bishop Edward U. Kmiec for the unveiling on April 4, the exact date of the founding of the College in 1908.

April 23rd is the date that has been designated by the president's council as a day of service within the College neighborhood. Alums are especially encouraged to participate.

All presidential events will carry a centennial theme for 2008 and these events include the 100th Commencement on May 17, 2008.

This picnic will have great food, fun and games. It will make a memorable family day for alumni, staff along with their families and the children from the West Side neighborhood surrounding the College.

The College community will be invited to join D'Youvillians whose years span the decades, as well as current and past faculty, staff and friends to celebrate the College's glorious past and exciting future at Homecoming. A celebratory liturgy will take place at St. Joseph's Cathedral, with Bishop Edward Kmiec officiating. An extraordinary reception and dinner are planned following the Mass.

Series Two of the Fireside Chats will feature current and retired professors from the departments of history, education, and math and natural science. Expect an exchange of ideas and a reflection of personal and sometimes conflicting philosophies.

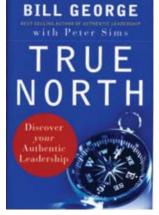

Plan to gather together for a special D'Youville Day with clusters of D'Youvillians living in your area, anywhere around the world. Formal or informal, the gatherings should revive old memories and establish old/new friendships.

The spirit of service will enliven D'Youville's Centennial celebration in 2008 through the Community Service Project, "100 to the Second Power." Students, faculty, administrators and College staff will dedicate 10,000 hours of service to local agencies and to the D'Youville College neighborhood.

Series Three of the Fireside Chats will feature both the outside world of business and the allied world of healthcare from the point of view of health services administration, and the disciplines of occupational therapy, physical therapy, physician assistant and dietetics.

A formal tea will take place in the beautiful Boethea Room of the Koessler Administration Building recalling earlier days for alumni of all ages to enjoy.

A centennial year end event is planned for spring 2009.

True North

is the internal compass

that guides you successfully through life.

It represents who you are as a human being at your deepest level.

It is your orienting point—your fixed point in a spinning world—that helps you stay on track as a leader....

When you follow your internal compass, your leadership will be authentic.

-From the introduction

THE BOOK: True North Bill George with Peter Sims Wiley (2007)

ill George has followed his initial best seller (Authentic Leadership: Rediscovering the Secrets to Creating Lasting Value) with True North, in collaboration with Peter Sims. The book weaves together George's concepts of authentic leadership and interviews with 125 individuals with backgrounds in politics, corporate life, entrepreneurship, sports and innovation. Interviewees range from 23 to 93 years of age. The book is presented in an appealing format that offers the reader the opportunity for self-reflection and for discovering one's own capacity for leadership in moving from one chapter to another.

The title and basic premise for True North lies in the four cardinal points of a compass. The center of George's compass represents Self-Awareness, the southern point represents an individual's Support Team, the western point denotes Integrated Life, the eastern cardinal point corresponds to Motivation, and the "True North" point represents the concepts of Values and Principals. True North interlaces the view of leadership and the skills required to be an authentic leader with real-life stories from individuals who have "made it," having achieved success by means of leadership.

George delineates his leadership concepts in three sections: Leadership is a Journey, Discover Your Authentic Leadership and Empowering People to Lead. These three sections provide the themes for each of the 11 chapters. True North combines self-reflection and the 125 interviews under an umbrella of what George has dubbed "authentic leadership." The authentic leader is ethically grounded, is passionate and possesses strong personal integrity. The book offers the reader the opportunity to complete exercises in the appendix at the conclusion of each chapter in order to generate reflection and a personal leadership development plan.

ith this noted, one might think that True North is just "another leadership book." Bookstore shelves are full of "flavor-of-the-week" books espousing leadership. However, this is not the case with True North. The integration of the individual stories within the chapters distinguishes this particular book. George and Sims weave stories of leaders – the likes of Howard Schultz, chairman and CEO, Starbucks; Martha Goldberg Aronson, vice president, investor relations, Medtronic; and Anne Mulcahy, chairman and CEO, Xerox – into their own stated five dimensions of leadership. These persons are seen as exemplars of George and Sims's tenets of knowing your authentic self, defining your values and leadership principles, understanding your motivations, building your support team and staying grounded by integrating all aspects of your life. The resulting interwoven account provides the reader a format that is distinctive and powerful.

eorge makes the point that with authentic leadership. individuals learn to be leaders from life experiences, both positive and negative. For example, Howard Schultz of Starbucks reveals how a specific event that occurred during his childhood impacted decisions made in adulthood. Many individuals are aware that Starbucks provides health insurance for employees who work as few as 20 hours per week. What many people don't know, is why. Howard Schultz tells the story of his father, a delivery truck driver, who fell on a sheet of ice and broke his ankle. He lost his job, and in turn, health benefits for the family. Schultz remembered that difficult period when he became responsible for the 140,000 employees of Starbucks, exercising the leadership to be the first American company to provide access to health coverage for qualified employees. "He dreamed of building a company that treated its employees well and provided health benefits.... His inspiration comes from 'seeing my father broken by the 30 terrible blue-collar jobs he had over his life, where an uneducated person just did not have a shot."

The multiple roles that women face in juggling a career and family are emphasized in the story of Medtronic's Martha Goldberg Aronson. Aronson moved up the ranks at Medtronic quickly in her first years with the company. When she reached the point in her career that she was a general manager, she was offered an international assignment in Europe. Aronson voiced concern regarding the effect such a career move would have on her family. At the time she had two children who were under the age of five, faced anxiety about being away from family support, and was apprehensive concerning what would happen with her husband's career if she accepted the position. In the end, Aronson accepted the assignment and the experience proved to be instrumental in moving her career to the next level at Medtronic. This experience was pivotal in Aronson's career because she took the risk when an opportunity presented itself.

The stories and experiences provided through the interviews lend a feeling of reality to True North. They provide the basis for understanding the importance of decisions, thus allowing the reader to gain new perspectives. The stories support George's dimensions and fervor for leadership, presenting a new paradigm.

Bill George brings impressive credentials as an author from the disciplines of business and higher education. He is professor of management practice, Henry B. Arthur Fellow of Ethics, at Harvard Business School. George spent ten years as a senior executive with Honeywell, ten years with Litton Industries, primarily as president of Litton Microwave Cooking, and chief executive of Medtronic from 1991-2001 (including chairman of the board from 1996-2002). George was named executive of the year by the Academy of Management (2001) and director of the year by the National Association of Corporate Directors (2001-02). In 2002, he was selected as one of the 25 most influential business people of the last 25 years by PBS Nightly News.

Sorting through the myriad of books related to leadership, True North offers a perspective that is interesting and easily put into practice. I found the format of the book (chapter, followed by leadership exercises) appealing. Perhaps even more important, True North fulfills the objective that "successful leadership takes conscious development and being true to your life story." George offers a perspective on the nature of leadership and challenges the reader to consider what role to play: passive leader or active leader. The book leaves one with the quandary of what one's legacy is to be and how it is to be achieved. True North offers the impetus to set one's course.

Family Sunday, December 2007

Mass was celebrated in the Blue Lounge by campus minister Rev. Thomas Ribits, OSFS. Chairpersons Rose Grierson St. Pierre '83, Bridget Lynch-Herod '84, and Patricia Kelly Losito '85 planned a delicious brunch served in the Porterview Room. Special holiday attire, beautiful poinsettia plants, cut-out cookies and eggnog added to the festive air. This year's attendees included alums and friends with four-generation, student, faculty and staff families. Pictures were taken, Santa listened to all requests, and memories were formed at the gathering and later in the College pool. As an added treat, guests were invited to attend the opening women's basketball game. D'Youville's Spartans won!

everal students were honored at the ceremony as follows: Kristin Foegen for Traditional PA Student of the Year, Nicole Rossney for Non-Traditional PA Student of the Year, Mary Remollino for Older Wiser Learner, Todd Harrington for Outstanding Clinical Community Service Project, Crystal Crossett for Outstanding Prevention Community Service Project and Julie Teprovich for Outstanding Research Project.

Nearing the final point of the event, the "white coat" ceremony occurred. Each student received a white medical coat appropriately embroidered with the recipient's name and the words "physician assistant." Dr. Andrew Esch, graduate faculty member of the department, presided over this part of the ceremony. He assisted each student in donning a coat and congratulated each graduate. Dr. Esch then presented his impressions of this graduating class, recounting their experiences going through the program and what their expectations might be as they progress in their profession.

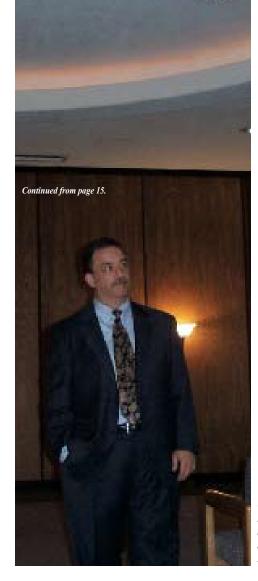

The Blue Lounge in the College Center was the scene of the reception following the ceremony where the guests enjoyed brunch. The room was filled to capacity with beaming parents and spouses, pleased faculty and graduates who graciously received congratulations.

ister Denise A. Roche, GNSH, Ph.D., joined the graduates and their guests and applauded the hard work and great success of this first group of students to embark on an advanced course of study and to bring it to a successful conclusion. After the event, Sister Denise expressed her appraisal and approval of the students and their accomplishments. She said,

"The ceremony acknowledging the first graduating class of the physician assistant bachelor's/master's program [was extraordinary]. These students began as freshmen or transfers and are receiving their master's degree in physician assistant. They were remarkable—their research was outstanding, there were a number who received their degrees magna cum laude and one student, summa cum laude. ...Their many sacrifices while they were students at D'Youville, their hard work and the remarkable education they have received make me so proud of them. I know that they will be great representatives of D'Youville and will bring approval and respect to the College as they practice in their chosen profession."

This degree is acknowledged to be an extremely difficult course of study. Physician assistant students have raised the bar on the level of study and accomplishment. The coursework is grueling and time consuming. Some students have work and family responsibilities in addition to their class and clinical commitments and they deserve extremely high praise for embarking on this profession.

Physicians are now inclined to include not just one physician assistant in their practices but to welcome several so that patients are given much quicker attention and their concerns are evaluated in a timely manner.

On a recent visit home, Vince stopped in at D'Youville to lecture to Dr. David Kelly's history class.

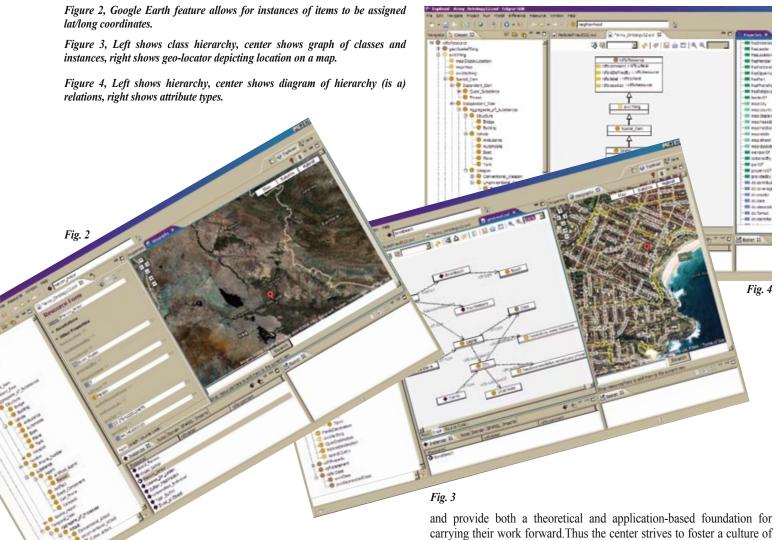

Vince explained, "We are involved with the development of policy, plans and methods to resolve issues of governance, economic development, and rule of law. I personally attend and participate in meetings that deal with these issues with US government agencies and the government of Iraq. There are times, I sit in amazement when I consider the meetings I had during the day and review the participants and the topics of discussion. I have been in meetings and watched the PM and Dep PM Baram Salah dictate to ministers what they would do; I have had dinner with the VP Mahdi and his advisors to discuss National Emergency Action Plans; I work with Coalition Forces and international organizations and it never fails to remind me of Dr. Grande's class that participated in the Model UN.

"I can tell you this," he added, "there is plenty of good being done here, and it's necessary. It will take a long time. ... Ambassador Khalazad put it this way, 'We have all the watches, and they have all the time."

Vincent is married to Elizabeth (Beth) O'Mara '79, who uses her BSN in working for Southern Tier Hospice. Their home is in Horseheads, N.Y. They have two children, Susan, a student at Syracuse University School of Law, and Vincent John, a graduate of St. John Fisher College in Rochester, N.Y.

When Vincent matriculated at D'Youville, he continued a family tradition. His aunt, Rose Marie DiVencenzo Azzarelli is a graduate of the class of 1957.

Currently, several doctoral students are working on topics that are directly related to research areas ongoing at the Center for Ontology & Interdisciplinary Studies. Topics include the following:

- "The ontology of diet," which examines peoples' conceptions of what a diet is and how these conceptual models relate to successes and failures associated with gastric bypass surgery;
- organizational characteristics associated with physician assistant training curricula that utilize patient belief models to improve upon patient involvement in treating chronic disease; and
- improvements upon current electronic systems that can monitor blood analysis and related co-morbidities associated with end-stage renal disease.

One overarching goal of the center is to provide a means for these students to understand the ontological issues associated with their research agendas research throughout the College as DYC transitions to university status.

Future plans for the center involve securing additional research funding from defense and pharmaceutical industries, as well as continuing to work with D'Youville doctoral students to produce publishable-quality work for journal and conference submission. The center is currently extending its partnerships to include the following: The National Center for Ontology Research (NCOR), The National Center for Multisource Information Fusion (NCMIF), The New York State Center for Bioinformatics and Life Sciences, The U.S. Govt. Federal Enterprise Architecture, The Boeing Corp., The U.S. Army Research Labs, The Lockheed Martin Corp., several large pharmaceutical corporations and The Computer Task Group (CTG).

Currently, Dr. Little continues to present his work at an impressive array of national and international conferences on topics of consciousness, ontology and information fusion. Within the last 22 months alone he has presented in Baltimore, Md., Florence, Italy, and Saarbrücken, Germany.

THE NEXT CELEBRATIONS

DEDICATION OF THE STATUE OF ST. MARGUERITE

April 4, 2008, 11:30 a.m.

Sculptor David Derner reports that the larger-than-lifesize statue of St. Marguerite d'Youville is on schedule and finishing touches will be completed in time for the dedication on the front lawn of the Koessler Administration Building. Currently, the space is a hubbub of construction as the site is being readied in time for the long-awaited unveiling. Join us!

COMMUNITY SERVICE PROJECT: 100 TO THE SECOND POWER

Throughout the 2008 calendar year

This is a project that invites all faculty, staff, students, clubs, trustees and alumni to contribute time to the goal of 10,000 community service hours to celebrate the D'Youville College centennial. There are a variety of ways for each member of the D'Youville College community to help reach this goal.

As part of the 100 to the Second Power Project, consider pledging 100 hours of community service in 2008. A team is forming for those who want to contribute 100 hours of community service during the year 2008. This team is called *Give 100. There are a number of ways to enroll:

- Online http://weare100.dyc.edu/committedtocaring/
- Contact Rev. Jan Mahle, associate campus minister, at 716.829.7693

For those who are not able to give as much as 100 hours of time, ROLLING UP OUR SLEEVES: April 23, 2008, is the date that has been designated by the president's council as a day of service within the College neighborhood. Participants will work at the West Side Community Center, Hispanics United of Buffalo, Habitat for Humanity and will be a part of neighborhood cleanup with the West Side Community Collaborative. All alums are encouraged to join in and help.

To participate, check out the Web page: http://weare100.dyc.edu/committedtocaring/ or contact Campus Ministry, 716.829.7672. There will be recognition events throughout 2008. Please sign up as soon as possible!

GLORIOUS! A Buffalo Premiere by Peter Quilter February 29 through March 3O

She thought she was God's gift to opera...but she was wrong! The joyful Florence Foster Jenkins had a passion for singing, but a voice of disastrous proportions which left audiences crying with laughter. Spinning from her bizarre recording sessions, unbelievable recitals and an ultimate triumph at New York's Carnegie Hall - this is a true, heart-warming story about a group of eccentric friends who lived their dreams. The Kavinoky Theatre is thrilled to feature Mary Kate O'Connell as the legendary singer.

A PICASSO A Buffalo Premiere by Jeffrey Hatcher May 2 through June 1

Pablo Picasso has been summoned to a storage vault for an interrogation by a beautiful German occupation officer whose mission is to discover which of the three Picasso paintings recently "confiscated" by the Nazis from their Jewish owners are real. The ministry of propaganda has planned an exhibit, and only the great artist himself can attest to their authenticity. At first Picasso agrees to confirm which of the three pictures is his own but when he learns that the "exhibition" is actually a burning of "degenerate art," he becomes desperate to save his work and engages in a pressurized negotiation. A cat-and-mouse drama about art, politics, sex and truth, with a twist at its climax.

Are you up to Challenge

D'Youville College, in conjunction with the Alumni Association, is offering a special opportunity for alumni to participate in the DYC Centennial Campaign. The Centennial Campaign fundraising goal of $8 million will help to provide the resources needed to develop a new academic program in pharmacy and to construct a state of the art classroom and laboratory facility for that program.

The Alumni Challenge Program encourages each alumni decade to challenge all other alumni decades in two categories: highest percent participation and highest dollar total raised. The winning decade in each category will be prominently recognized with a plaque in the new academic building. Please consider participating in this challenge program with your gift to the Centennial Campaign. Since participation is one of the categories, each and every gift counts, no matter the size.

Regular updates in subsequent issues of D'Mensions and on D'Youville's online alumni community site will indicate decade totals.

In the coming months, expect to hear from one of your classmates or one of our student callers, who will be happy to inform you of the exciting changes happening at D'Youville and will ask for your participation in the Centennial Campaign Alumni Challenge Program.

Gifts may be pledged for payment in installments over three to five years or on a pre arranged pledge payment schedule.

- Any gift may be made as a memorial or honorary gift.
- Campaign gifts made to D'Youville College may be made as:
 - Gifts of cash
 - Gifts of appreciated securities
 - Life income gifts
 - Bequests or other forms of estate planning
 - Life insurance policies
 - Employer matching gifts

Those who support the College's future by establishing a planned gift will be recognized by membership in the Providence Society.

To reach our goal, we need your support. Please join us, in the effort to ensure that D'Youville's future continues to be as vital as its past."

—Sister Denise A. Roche, GNSH, Ph.D., President
